AGAIN megaton bomb, must have sounded ominous to all but the very young. It was on November 30, 1939 — 22 years ago — that the Soviet Union invaded its small neighbour. Finland's gallant fight to preserve its independence lasted four months and earned it the admiration of the free world. There was a movement of the incredibly sources.

It is to be hoped that Finland will be able to mobilize the same spirit of in dependence in the face of this renewed threat, for it is clear now that the USSR will seek to incorporate Finland in its defence system. The Scandinavian states are already meeting to consider what this may mean for them.

The Finnish President. Mr. Kekkonen, has held office for almost six years and he is standing for reelection in January. He has proved himself up to now adept in his dealings with he Russians while remaining well-liked by the West. If his neutrality has been a little out of alignment — he has been host to Mr. Khrushchev in Finland on two occasions — he has recently begun to redress the balance. Last month he offset an earlier visit to Kekkonen, has held set an earlier visit to Moscow by official visits to Washington and Ot-Raiations between Fin-land and the Soviet Union have been extremely cordial, even effusive on the surface. Innumerable surface. Innumerable goodwill missions, both commercial and cultural, have been sent to Finland by the big "neighbour in the east. This good-neighbourliness is not due only to geographical prox-

Russia has been interaffairs because for many years now the country has been a battlefield of Communism and Democracy. Following the Sovracy. Following the societ-finnish peace treaty, the once-banned Communist Party was legalized extremely and has been extremely active. While the majority of Finns feel themselves part of the West and the democratic presshas soft-pedalled anti-Soviet comment, for fear of offending the touchy Russians, the local Communist newspapers have kept up a constant onslaught on the West. Nevertheless, the democratic forces have managed to hold en the West. Nevertheless, the democratic forces have managed to hold their own, as can be seen from President Kekkonen's decision to go to Washington last month, thus following up a visit earlier this year to Britain

There are many members of President Kekkonen's own Agrarian Party, particularly the younger ones among them, who profess what they call a "third line." They believe that since Finland can make no decisive contribution to the struggle between the two world blocs, the country should remain completely neutral and at the same time be circumspect in dealing with domestic Communism. Even those Finns who admire the West re-happened with Hungary.

It remains to be seen whether the followers of the "third line" can remain firm in their confidence that the East-West struggie will not be decided in Finland. As the clouds of radio-active fall-out gather more densely with each successive Soviet blast, and the non-Communist world grows angrier at Khrushchev's disregard of all its pleas, as tension grows in Berlin and in Tirans, no-one can tell which country will find itself elected the new — and perhaps the last — Armagedden.

The appeal significantly comes on the eve of the November 1 anniversary of the Algerian rebellion. It is feared this may witness unprecedented inter-communal bloodshed with head-on clashes between FLN Moslem demonstrators and OAS European counter-demonstrators, despite heavy French apart.

According to M. Abdesselam, FLN and OAS emissaries have already had secret contacts since the FLN leaders realize that agreements reached with Paris cannot be implemented against the will of OAS, which represents virtually the entire European minority.

Five-Year Truce

The object of eventual FLN-OAS peace negotiations, M. Abdesselam suggests, should be an agreement on a five-year interim truce period during which Algeria will exercize full domestic autonomy dedica-ted to national reconstruc-tion and at the end of which a self-determination refer-endum will be held.

a seri-determination referendum will be held.

If in those five years inter-communal coexistence can be made to work then even European settlers may well opt for the independence of Algeria, which country, M. Abdesselam declares, belongs as much to the minority of European origin as it does to the Moslem majority.

It is noteworthy that M. Abdesselam, an erstwille tennis champion and Member of Parliament and an advocate of integration, has been the target of FLN terrorists, while "Figaro" editor Brisson lately has had plastic bombs laid at his door by OAS terrorists.

Cabinet Shuffle In Jordan

In Jordan

The Jordan Cabinet was reshuffled yesterday, on the eve of the opening of the new Parliament, when King Hussein is to deliver his major policy speech, according to Amman Radio.

Under the change, Wasfi Mirza who had quit his defence portfolio to run for election, has received the Public Works portfolio. The Defence Ministry was given as a concurrent job to Minister of Interior Hassan el Kateb. Justice Minister Yacoub Muamer was given the new portfolio of Prime Minister's Office Affairs.

TEL AVIV. — Mapai. Abdut Ha'aveda. the I Religious Party and Poalei Agudat Israel last in tialled agreements setting up a new coalition ment headed by Mr. David ing 60 of the 126 Knesset voice.

The new Cabinet will have either 15 or 16 ministers, the final point to be settled to-day.

The central policy-making bodies of the parties will convene here during today in order to approve the draft agreements. Mapai and Ahdud Ha'aveda leaders were still sitting after midnight last night, thrashing out details of their agreement.

The basic lines of policy are similar to those of the previous coalition. To prevent later disagreements, more detailed conditions have been laid down for instances when abstention of coalition Knesset Members is permissible. In general the agreement is much longer and more detailed than previous platforms, covering seven closely-typed pages.

The present Mapai membership of the Cabinet will remain, In the smaller coalition, Mapai will be entitled to 10 Cabinet placea, two more than before. Although there will be some changes, in their portfolios. Mr. Abba Eban, who is about to leave on a six-month lecture tour, may become Minister without Portfolio, while Mr. Zalman Aranne is expected back in the Cabinet as Education Minister.

Another Blast as Protests Made

Protests and condemnation of the Soviet super-bomb continued to flow in from many world capitals as both European and Japanese observatories reported explosion of another Soviet nuclear bomb in the Arctic yesterday.

Kew Observatory in London reported earth tremors which experts said indicated a 20 to 30 megaton bomb. Japan's Central Meteorological Service said the Soviet blast was far smaller than the super-bomb set off on Monday and was expleded north of Novaya Zemlya. Stuttgart Seismological Centre said it was a nuclear exolosion in the Novaya Zemlya area four or five times weaker than Monday's.

Kiruna Observatory in north Sweden reported it considered the explosion to have been made about 125 miles in the air in the morning, but the Uppsala Seismological Institute said its recordings indicated it was an earthquake.

The aim of the Herut motion was to have the Knesset urge the parliaments of the world to appeal to the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.R. to stop nuclear tests. This motion was opposed only by the Communists, with Mapam abstaining.

The Mapam motion would have the Knesset appeal to all delegations at the U.N. General Assembly with regard to the cessation of atomic tests, general disarmament and the destruction of all atomic weapons. There was no opposition to this motion, but Herut abstained.

The Communist motion, presented by Dr. Moshe Sneh, was entitled "The question of atomic tests and of general and absolute disarmament, in the light of the international situation." It was supported only by the Communists, with Mapam abstaining, and the rest of the House opposed.

authorities. In other words, he held, the only criteria required for obtaining a liheld, the only criteria required for obtaining a licence are: the desire to carry on a classified trade in the municipal area and the approval of the health authorities and the police. It makes no difference whatsoever, he continued whether the place in which the business is to be carried on is owned or leased by the person applying for the licence; for the Ordinance does not empower municipal councils to guard against trespassing or breaches of leases. The only purpose of the Ordinance is to ensure the regulation of trades and industries from the point of view of the bealth and safety of the public. It is not within the powers of a municipal council, therefore, to demand-proof of his interest in the business from the person asking for a licence. As long as the health and police authorities do not object to the granting of a licence, then the council is obliged to issue one.

In any case, continued Justice Cohn, as licences are not transferable, anyone carrying on a classified business must do so in the name of the person holding the licence. So that in the present case if the licence had been given to Mr. Yakiri, Mr. Falkon would not have been entitled to carry on the butcher shop unless he were the former's partner or associate. All three partners had, however, applied for the licence, so that this question did not arise.

Justice Cobn then went on to consider the respondents' objections to granting Mr. Halfon a licence. No one disputes the fact, he said, The respondents and therestore shown so cause whatsoever for refusing to grant the three petitioners the requested licence, held Justice Cohn. It is an open scret, he continued that the respondents were reluctant to grant the licence because the petitioners sell non-kosher meat in the butcher shop concerned. He could understand — without justifying the respondents desire to find other considerations on which to base their refusal to grant the licence, in the light of the fact that the religious considerations is invalid. But they had faffed

Jest Festilians and Appendix A that he was found guilty of having sold contaminated meat in 1955. The responding ents' objection was based, therefore, on their fear that he would again sell contaminated meat and thus endanger the health of the Ramat Gan residents. But, he continued even if this fear warrant the refusal of a licence. For while the respondents are obliged to protect the health of their residents, they may do so only within the limits of their legal powers. The Ordinance entrusts the police with the task of preventing anyone from getting a licence in the interests of public order, and does not empower the Municipal Council to do so. The question of whether a person who has once been found guilty of an offence in connection with his trade would be a potential source of danger to the public if allowed to carry on this trade is, therefore, one for the police and not for the Municipal Council. In any case, held Justice Cohn, it would appear to him that, in the absence of any weighty reasons to the contrary, a person who has already been punished for his crimes should not be punished again by being deprived of a trading licence, unless there be an express provision to that effect in the law.

Efforts to Put Off Saturday Game Continue, Knesset Told

The Ministry of Education's Sports Authority has added its efforts to those of the Israel Embassy in Rome to have the Israel-Italy soccer game scheduled for Saturday switched to another day, Minister Abba Eban told the Knesset esterday.

"We are continuing these efforts," he added.

Knesset

Rabbi Lorincz said that a nation that respects itself respects its traditions. If there was no way of changing the date, then Israel should pay the fine rather than play on the Sabbath. than play on the Sabbath. There was no doubt that if the Israel team desecrated the Sabbath, the Italian au-the Sabbath the Italian authorities would pay no attertion to the Jewish Sabbath in the future.

Four years ago an Israel mission visited Swiss army installations on the High Holy Days, Rabbi Lorinez said. Since then, Jewish soldiers in Switzerland have had difficulty in getting leave on those days.

Mr. Eban agreed that while the Sports Authority was established to aid in the development of sports and physical education and to supervise the activities of sports organizations, it had not be given the commensurate authority.

Mr. Eban trusted that the discussion in the Knesset would add moral weight to the Government's effort to change the date in this case, and to prevent a repetition of such incidents in the lu-ture.

The Knesset rejected a motion for the agenda sub-mitted by Rabbi Lorinez on the sending of religious children to non-religious in-stitutions of Youth Aliya.

Foreign Ministry Against Proposed Sale of Incode

Jerusalem Post Economic Reporter

In view of Israel's political and commercial ties with Ethiopia, the Foreign Ministry has expressed its opposition to the proposed sale of the Israel-owned Incode meat freezing and canning factory in that country to a British group, The Jerusalem Post learns.

The Post further learns that the Agriculture Minister, Mr. Moshe Dayan, also opposes the sale, and that as a result pressure will be brought to bear on the owners to reconsider.

The factory has been shut down for about six months for lack of funds. The management halmes the Israel Government for bringing this about by continuing to pay only 40 cents per tin of meat after overhead and production costs had risen. As a result, the management opened negotiations to lease the factory to the British group for $50,000 a year, and also to give the group an option to buy after several years.

ested in the stoppage of the tests, and who was not guided by any political motives, must realize that the stoppage must take place in such a manner that there would be the maximum assurance possible that tests would not be resumed at the will of one side or another. For that reason Israel had supported and would continue to support negotiations, agreements and effective supervision.

Presenting the Mapam motion, Mrs. Emma Talmi expressed her deep regret and concern over Monday's test. She noted that in 1988 the Soviet Union had demonstrated its goodwill be halting its tests unilaterally, but that its offer had not been duplicated by a commitment by the other nuclear powers.

Mapam had regretted Israel's vote at the U.N. (against the Afro-Asian resolution requesting France to abandon its Sahara tests.) For it was not the intention but the act that did the damage, and it made no difference whether a test was made by a friend or enemy.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Talmi said,

Reichawehr (Hitler's Army), and 130 Nazi generals were serving in that "different Germany." But despite the danger that Germany would receive atomic weapons, and the danger of war from that quarter, the offer of the Soviet Union had been rejected. Nevertheless, Mapam did not justify the renewal of tests by the Soviet Union.

Dr. Snehr proposing the Communist motion, said that there should be a debate on nuclear tests — but it should go into the causes and circumstances, and into the real dangers to peace.

It was not the Soviet Union that had ushered in the atomic age, and it was not the Soviet Union that represented a danger to world peace; the danger was from a remilitarized Germany. "This is not a bomb for destruction. It is a bomb to save mankind."

Dr. Sneh declared.

Mrs. Meir said she was opposed to Dr. Sneh's motion for many reasons, but one would suffice. If the Knesset did decide to hold the debate proposed it would have to devote so little time to clear up some simple concepts; what is life and what is death, what is war and what is peace, what is a destructive bomb and schal is a destructive bomb and schal is a destructive bomb.

DOCTORS' HOURS

Bits. — In reply to Dr. Bergman (your issue of yesterday), it seems to me that the discussion should not be limited to the number of hours an intern works in a hospital but should deal mainly with the question of whether this system of instruction and work is justified.

I should like to point out that a doctor undergoing specialized training in a hospital works very hard not only in his first year but also during every subsequent year. The fact that this system pervalis in many Western universities does not make it desirable.

There can be no doubt that experience in every important, but the present system of instruction for doctors raises several questions: Is a person subjected to this system indeed a heter doctor? Does only a high scientific and medical standard make better doctors? A cruel and categorical answer to this question was given during world War II by the doctors of Nail Germany.

The present system of advanced training does not allow the doctor to find even enough time to read professional literature; and it deprives him of the optor funity to pursue outside interests which develop a well-rounded personality.

It is clear that if we want to compete and reach high "scientific and medical standards" we must encourage the present system of work and study, but we should not be surprised if our "scientific geniuses" turn out to be "imperiored if our "scientific and medical standards" we must encourage the present system of work and study, but we should not be surprised if our "scientific enliuses" turn out to be "imperiored if our scientific and medical standard we must encourage the present system of work and study, but we should not be surprised if our "scientific enliuses" turn out to be "imperiored if our fiscientific enliuses" turn out to be "imperiored if our fiscientific enliuses" turn out to be "imperiored if our fiscientific enliuses" turn out to be "imperiored if our fiscientific enliuses" turn out to be "imperiored if our fiscientific enliuses" turn out to be "imperiored if

FIGHTING CANCER

By Hugh Orgel

CANCER, which kills 17 out of each 100 of the population, is slowly ceasing to be a dirty word. In those countries in which the disease is being faced up to boldly as one of the fact of life, the incidence of resulting death has been reduced by early recognition and treatment.

Cancer Week, which has just con-cluded in Israel, is part of a public relations drive to bring the facts of cancer, its recognition and early treat-ment out into the open here. Far too many deaths still result from this dismany deaths still result from this disease because of the fear of the individual to hear the doctor's pronouncement that a growth exists and that the growth is malignant. According to medical experts, not all growths are malignant, and not all malignant' growths are fatal—though they may become so if not treated early enough. If caught in time, successful treatment is possible in many cases.

THE United States is one of the countries most advanced in its practical approach to the problem of cancer, its detection and treatment. This advancement came largely as a result of pub-lic relations campaigns similar to the present one in Israel—campaigns which still continue in the U.S. in an effort to reach backward centres or those sections of the population which have so far withstood the efforts to educate them towards full recognition of need for both cancer research and personal

The cancer slogan in the U.S. is based on the double meaning of the word "check." "Fight Cancer with a Check and a Check-Up" the American is told in newspaper advertisements, on posters and over radio and television. The check helps foster cancer research, but of possibly greater importance at the moment is the annual check-up — a medical visit almost unknown in Israel today. Here we have newspapers that prominent people have gone into hospital for a few days for a medical check-up, but for the normal, average citizen the idea of going to his doctor when he is feeling well, for a once-a-year medical examination is something new and still not accepted The average patient only goes to the doctor when he is feeling unwell—and the average doctor still expresses extreme surprise that anyone should come to him still in a state of good health — the impression is that the doctor feels that you are wasting his time, which should be devoted to "really sick people." And yet it is this annual check-up, now accepted as routine throughout most of the U.S., which is

DURING six years residence in the U.S. and membership in a "Group Health Association"—a private medical and hospital insurance scheme running somewhat on the lines of the Histadand nospital insurance scheme running somewhat on the lines of the Histadrut's Sick Fund (but with all its services — medical, pediatric, X-Ray and laboratory facilities all housed in the same building, with immediate access to each and every department at the request of the doctor concerned during request of the doctor concerned, during the selfsame visit) my family and I sutomatically underwent annual medical examinations—each one thorough, from head to toe, inside and out—including X-Ray and, when thought necessary (or a routine matter, without any special urgency, appointments for it could be made a month or so in advance. Full reports are kept of each patient and reports are kept of each patient and brought up-to-date at each examination, so that during the year, when called in in an emergency or to deal with any specific ailment, each doctor had full and immediate access to a full and detailed picture of his patients and could keep an eye on progress, improve-ment or deterioration of any medical fact he thought worth noting. In addi-tion to this yearly examination at which special attention is paid to incipient beart ailments, cancer and tuberculosis, in addition to weight or glandular change, any woman visiting a doctor for any reason is automatically checked by Group Health doctors for first signs of cancer.

THE Israel Cancer Association has announced that one of this country's urgent needs is the establishment try's urgent needs is the establishment and maintenance of cancer detection clinics, to which citizens should be persuaded to report. With such a large proportion of the country's population already enrolled in existing sick funds, surely this could be made one of their responsibilities, thus freeing the money available to the Cancer Association for use in its other essential branches. Much of the success of the American anti-cancer drive resulted from a carefully-planned and executed public relations campaign, worked out in cooperation with the country's top public relations experts, many of whom donated their services free. Sometimes the singers did not come out clearly above the orchestra, but it seems, that this was what the composer intended: Mahler—the master of orchestration par excellence—probably desired that in places the human voice be heard mainly as part of the general sound texture. It must not be forgotten that he called this work a Symphony and not a song cycle.
